Europe's Festival of Ideas

When Nobel Prize laureates, courageous entrepreneurs, extraordinary artists and engaged people from civil society meet in a small Tyrolean mountain village, new ideas are bound to emerge. When high-level European politicians, presidents, members of government and managers are added to the mix, then actions quickly follow words.

Where Ideas Can Grow

Since 1945, hundreds of international speakers from academia, business, politics, culture, and civil society have been transforming the Tyrolean mountain village of Alpbach into the European summer capital of discourse. Together with 5,000 participants, including 700 young scholarship holders from all over the world, they search for answers to the fundamental challenges facing our society.
