IN BRIEF

Building on the successful 2017 programme, in 2018 the summer school will focus on the interplay between economic freedoms and human rights and how that shapes the EU's global role.

The programme provides unique networking opportunities and receptions, all whilst earning 5 ECTS in a supportive, structured and open academic environment.

We especially welcome students with learning needs, disabilities and non-native English speakers.

In the aftermath of Brexit and the election of Donald Trump, the EU faces challenges to its role as a powerful global economy and a promoter of human rights. This unique, credit-bearing summer school, invites participants to engage with and learn from European academics and professionals as we consider how these two forces are shaping the EU and its relationship with other countries and regions.
